In the publication of this article [1] there is an error in the Results section in the sub-section ‘Better financial incentives and less bureaucracy’.

The error: “Some participants felt that the financial incentives to be involved were too scarce and increasing the retribution for service user involvement may be a way to get more people interested.”

Should instead read: “Some participants felt that the financial incentives to be involved were too scarce and increasing the remuneration for service user involvement may be a way to get more people interested.”

This has now been included in this correction.
